HISTORY OF THE HOSPITAL

In 1900 High Point was a growing city and saw the great need of a hospital. The Junior Order, composed of many of the town's leading citizens, became interested in this and decided to buy a place for a hospital to serve the community.

In 1904, a frame house was bought, where the Burrus Memorial now stands. The first superintendent was Miss Josephine Coleman, now Mrs. R. C. Soyers, a registered nurse, graduated from the St. Andrew's Home in Lynchburg, Virginia.

In 1911, financial worries came about, so the Junior Order decided that the hospital should be in the hands of the doctors who used it. Dr. John T. Burrus and Dr. Guy F. Duncan took it into their hands at this time.

In 1916, Dr. Burrus and Dr. H. W. McCain took over duties as partners. In 1918 Miss Gilbert Muse, now Mrs. John McCaskill, became superintendent.

After the death of Dr. McCain Dr. Burrus bought his stock in the organization and became sole owner of the hospital.

In 1922 Dr. H. L. Brockmann came to High Point to take over some of Dr. McCain's work and to establish a laboratory in connection with the institution. Miss Lillie Pearle Wood became the first laboratory technician.

Dr. Richard Shuggardt took over X-ray and urological work which had been done by Dr. McCain.

In 1927 new operating equipment was obtained as well as new rooms built for nursery and diet kitchen.

Miss Hazel Johnson became a part-time instructor of nurses. She and the staff doctors planned a comprehensive program for nursing education.

The school has grown considerably since that time. Since 1935 Miss Johnson has been fulltime instructor. This school has consistently met all the requirements of the North Carolina Standardization Board of Nurse's Training School and of the American Hospital Association.

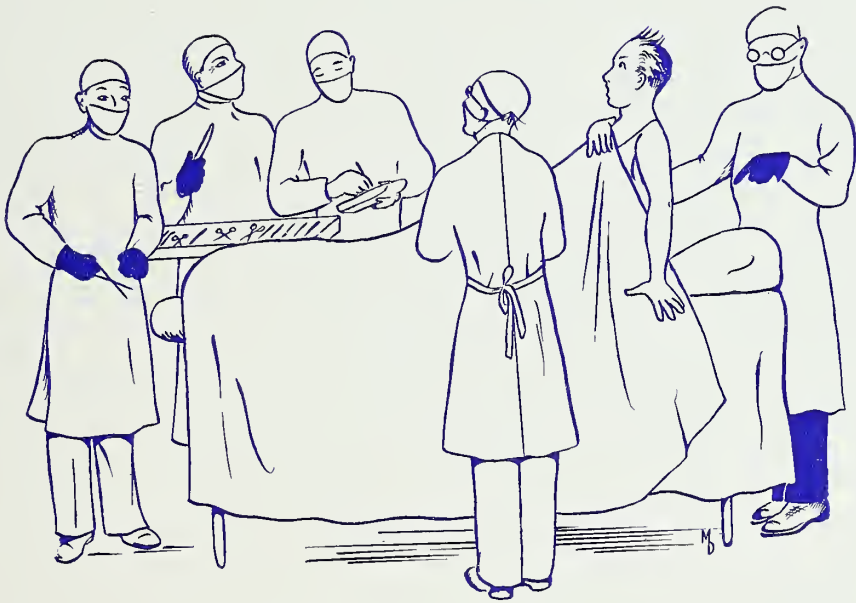

The hospital personnel has grown as well as the nursing group. The equipment and buildings of the hospital have been kept up-to-date by repair and replacements.

In 1933 the High Point Hospital was bought by the Duke Foundation and turned over to a capable Board of Directors, to be administered, as it always had been, for the benefit of the community. Dr. Burrus remained chief of the staff. The name was changed to the "Burrus Memorial Hospital."

After the death of Dr. Burrus in 1936, Dr. H. L. Brockmann succeeded him as chief of the staff.

In 1940 additional provisions for seven patients, a large laboratory, and two examining rooms were added. There are more extensive future developments in mind at present.

Class History

On September first, nineteen hundred and thirty eight, six girls arrived on the campus of the Burrus Memorial Hospital. Friendships budded and classes were started the following day. How our eyes bulged when the do's and don'ts were instructed to us. A month later three other girls were added to our class and things went smoothly but slowly along with a grand finale at Christmas when we were granted, by surprise, a two-weeks vacation.

After the holidays we were introduced to the halls in the hospital. My! how our chins fell when we saw all the "implements" (or should I say instruments) which, we were told, were supposed to become familiar to us. The only thing that helped us to hold our heads up was the caps and bibs which came to us at this time. One of our classmates realized her calling was music and is now teaching a number of pupils.

The months passed by. Soon the classes were over, and a reception was given in honor of the seniors. Summer vacations began and was followed by the same routine of classes. A new class was added and also one from St. Lukes Hospital added to our class.

Time passes quickly and we were at this time "senior nurses." And now as this, our last year draws to its close, we look back fondly upon our trials and tribulations, and remember our many good times together. May all students who follow us find in this school of nursing the joy that we as a class have found.

Miss Haltom: "I found a 100-year-old rat in the basement."

Miss Thompson: "How did you know it was 100 years old?"

Miss Haltom: "It had a date in its mouth."

Miss Johnson: "Have any of you had ethics in high school?"

Miss Crouse: "Yes, we took that up in Biology."

Miss Croom: "There are times at night when starvation stares me in the face."

Miss Kallam: "It must not have been so pleasant for either of you."

A newly-created papa received the following tidings in a telegram:

"Hazel just gave birth to an eight-pound baby girl this morning. Both doing nicely."

On the message was a sticker reading: "When you want a boy, call Western Union."

Miss McCormick, in making the day report, was found to be writing that Mrs. Payne had good results.

Miss Bailey was somewhat confused when she helped Dr. Parks with a breech in reporting that she saw hair on the baby's head.

Miss Dugger: "What is a microscopic being?"

Miss Lundy: "Something you can only see with the naked."

Dr. Brockmann: "Many of you students are like processed coffee—98 per cent of the active ingredients are removed from the bean."

Sam Jones: "Dr. Flagge, if you will please sir give my wife the kind of treatment you gave her last week. It helped so much."

Dr. Flagge: "Sam, what kind was that?"

Sam: "You know, sir, it wuz the time you put a wrapping around her arm and pumped something in her vein."

The young man who had been called up explained firmly that in his case there was no need for a medical examination.

"I'm fit and I want to fight! I want to go over on the next boat! I want to go right into the front line, but I want to have a hospital close, so that if I get hit no time will be wasted in taking me where I can get mended right away, so that I can get right back to the line without losing a minute! Pass me in, doctor! Don't waste any time on me! I want to fight and keep fighting!"

The doctor, however, insisted, and when he had completed his examination he reported a perfect specimen.

"You don't find anything wrong with me?" asked the man.

"Nothing."

"But, doctor, don't you think I'm a bit crazy?"

Miss Stafford: "Arthur, this plate evidently wasn't dried after it was washed."

Arthur: "Whattya mean, wasn't dried? That's your soup."

Miss Simmons: "Don't wear your heart on your sleeve. It's liable to get a lot of bumps there."

Miss Pendry: "Just because a girl has a streamlined figure is no sign she has no resistance!"

Miss Colclough: "So he is a practical fellow?"

Miss Parks: "Yes, he uses a skeleton in his closet for a coat hanger."

Dr. Harrison (to his medicine class): "Some girls are wise, while others are, well, otherwise."

Miss Bradley in the nursery tried to discourage one of the two-day old babies from sucking its thumb.

"Don't suck your little thumb like that," she cooed, "you may need it some day to get a lift."

The height of illegibility—A doctor's prescription written with a post-office pen in the rumble seat of a second-hand car.

An out patient to miss Bringle: "Are you the girl who gave me this appointment with Dr. Brockmann?"

Miss Bringle: "Yes, I am."

Out Patient: "Well, you don't look a day older."

A QUEER WEDDING

The Clinical laboratory was the scene of a very charming wedding on Saturday, May 1st, when Miss Mercury Thermometer was united in marriage to Mr. Rapid Pulse.

The Rev. Enema Stand officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, B. E. D. Pan, and wore a gorgeous gown of white enamel with a court train of rubber tubing lined with barium and held in place by a small silver clamp. She carried a shower bouquet of sputum cups and pale pink kidney basins and was attended by Miss Ann Asthetic, Miss Violet Ray, and Miss Ethel Chloride, similarly attired in short white gowns a la Hospital, held in place at the back of the neck and wearing a picture hat, basin-shaped, with hypodermic mounts. The groom gave them each a necklace of aspirin.

The bride's only jewel was a family heirloom, a rare old gold tooth. Her veil of beautiful white gauze was worn in a highly sterilized fashion, with tiny bands of morphia, held in place with shiny clips and three sub-cutaneous sutures of catgut.

Little Miss Rubber Catheter, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, dressed in glistening glycerine.

The guests were rushed to their seats by ushers Castor Oil and Epsom Salts. During the service they stood in the chancel which was banked with forget-me-nots, huge bed-pans with hypodermic sprays. Miss Steryl Izer sang several selections during the ceremony and Mrs. S. S. Enema sang, "O Promise Me."

Mrs. Ill Leo Colitis, grandmother of the bride, was an out-of-town guest. She wore a gown of yellow jaundice and a beautiful lavalliere of precious gallstones and a small iodeokan turban. Other out-of-town guests were the Misses Chronic and Acute Appendicitis, Sir Osteo Myelitis, accompanied by his daughter, Polly Myelitis. Baby Rickets was also present.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Pulse trembled off on their honeymoon, which will be spent in wards D and L. On their return they will reside in Gergy Apartments on Laboratory Avenue.
